

FACTSHEET

MARCH 2023

Renaissance Investment Managers

Dear investors,

Another volatile JFM quarter

Over the last 3-4 years, JFM (Jan-Feb-Mar) quarter has turned out to be a bad omen for the equity markets. After Covid (multiple waves) and Russia-Ukraine war, JFM in 2023 was jolted by an unexpected banking crisis in the western world. While the world was still fighting a battle against stubborn inflationary pressures, SVB Bank followed by Credit Suisse fallouts drove further uncertainty for the equity markets across the globe. However, the weird part of this story is the 360 degree reversal in the US FED's policy which has moved from quantitative tightening to quantitative easing. After a doom's day scenario getting built in JFM quarter, the rest of the calendar year has been marked by a smart recovery for equity markets in the last 3 years. While we hate to blindly extrapolate historical trends, but a move from quantitative tightening to quantitative easing could potentially be a good reason for equity markets to rally from hereon.

Global banking crisis is unlikely to have any meaningful impact on Indian banking system or the economy. Foreign banks account for less than 1% of the country's total branch network and in terms of banking assets the contribution is ~7%. More importantly, for all foreign banks, contribution from Indian operations is inconsequential in their overall scheme of things. On the other hand, Indian banks have a paltry presence in international geographies and have no dependence on foreign banks for raising deposits/ borrowings. Whichever way one looks, Indian banks are largely immune from the global turmoil. On the contrary, Indian banking system is going through its strongest phase ever in multiple decades. We have spoken about this multiple times in our notes earlier.

The Indian economy is not completely immune global upheaval; however, it certainly remains in a far better position than the world. Gross GST collection for the FY22-23 stood at Rs 18tn, which implies a very strong 22% YoY growth. While the high growth is also partly due to inflation and higher compliance, but ex of these two factors also, the collections are quite robust and reassuring.

Despite the initial setback to the Make in India programme, the Govt of India persisted with its drive to increase the manufacturing footprint in the Indian economy. PLI scheme has undoubtedly been a success. Another green shoot is also visible in the defence manufacturing and exports of the country. Since FY16-17, defense exports have increased 10 times (chart below) to Rs 15,920crs in FY22-23. Given our historical track record, this is massive and really encouraging. More importantly, the Govt has set a target of Rs 35,000cr of defence exports for FY25. This implies more than doubling of exports in just two years. If India can pull this off, this will certainly be a game changing moment for defence industry. Its noteworthy to highlight that defence orders to the tune of Rs 45,000cr were placed in the last week of Mar23. This clearly shows the intent of the government to drive defence manufacturing/ exports in a big way.

Equity markets are amidst a tug-of-war with global uncertainties on one side and domestic opportunities on the other. We believe there are structural tailwinds for the Indian economy emanating from PLI scheme, Make in India, China+1 and capex cycle recovery amongst others. These are structural drivers for the economy which are unlikely to be bogged down by intermittent slowdown in demand or EL-Nino kind of events. Consequently, we continue to remain sanguine on the long-term growth prospects of the Indian economy.

Happy investing!
